The Devonshire Hunting Tapestries, are believed to have been made between 1430-1450, in Arras, France. The V&A acquired these tapestries from the estate of the Duke of Devonshire.

The Devonshire Swans depicts both Otters and Swans. Otters were hunted not to eat but for their skins and because they ate the fish that were needed for the table. Swan meat, however, was highly desirable and here boys are seen robbing a swan's nest.
