The Hardwick Verdures come from the National Trust's Hardwick Hall and are believed to have been part of the collection of Elizabeth Talbot, Countess of Shrewsbury, also known as 'Bess of Hardwick'. She became one of the most influential women of her age. Married and widowed four times, Bess was an astute businesswoman who succeeded in amassing a huge personal fortune and extensive estates.

Her homes, including Hardwick, were adorned with sumptuous contents and furnishings, the value of which equalled or exceeded that of the buildings themselves.
